

Bartlett, Catherine Thom, ed. "My Dear Brother" A Confederate Chronicle. Richmond: Dietz Press, 1952.

Whiskey, drunkenness, 54
Home and what was not stolen by the Yankees, 66-67
Slaves, confiscation, emancipation, 68
Fredericksburg inhabitants and refugees, 75-77
Clothing prices, 79
Death of child, scarlet fever, 81, 85
Confederate morale, early in 1863, 81-82
Morale, northern Democrats, reconstruction, 83
Slaves running away, black soldiers, 84
Escaped slave, mammy, 85-86
Blockade running, commodities, prices, 90-91
Runaway slave, 92
Yankee operations in Virginia, April 1863, 93
Slaves leaving, overseer, 94
Northern peace meetings, 97
Yankee destruction and burning in Gloucester, 97
Officer commission, conscription, 100
Optimistic about Gettysburg campaign, 100
Factory of artificial limbs, 102-3
Morale, summer of 1863, 103
European intervention, 104
Conscription, 105
Gettysburg, Vicksburg, and Charleston, 106
Peace prospects far off, 109
Confederates and Mexico, 118, 120
Slaves running off to Yankees, 126
Oath, 127
Emancipation, black soldiers, 127-28
Slaves running off, food prices, 132-33
Peninsula, Butler, oath, refugee, 143-44
Suffering, hardship, independence, 145
Private letters examined by Yankees, 150
Exchanged prisoners in Richmond, 151
Slaves, deluded, Yankees, 153
Confederate prisoner in New Orleans, 159-62