

Brevard, Keziah. Brevard, Keziah. A Plantation Mistress on the Eve of the Civil War: The Diary of Keziah Goodwyn Hopkins Brevard, 1860-1861. Edited by John Hammond Moore. Columbia: University of South Carolina Press, 1993.

Anger, 21
Religious yearning, 28
Religion and slavery, 32
Troublesome slaves, 33
Fear of slave violence, character of slaves, John Brown, 37-38
Troublesome slaves, 41-42
Crisis times and divine punishment, 43
Election of Lincoln, slaves, slavery, 49-50
Northern fanatics, prays for country, 51
Slavery, race mixing, paternalism, 51-52
National crisis and divisions, 56
Slavery, safety, Africa, 58
Suspicion of slaves poisoning coffee, 64
Union and secession, 69-70
Southern rights, 70-71
Praying for her country, 71-73
South Carolina soldiers, 73
Prayer for country and protection against northerners, 75
Democracy has hurt the south, 76
Fears of military governments, 78
Abolitionists cutting our throats, 79
Character of slaves, 81-82
Yankee fanatics, bloodshed, 82-83
Might have united around Douglas rather Lincoln, 83
Trouble with slaves, 83
James Henley Thornwell Thanksgiving sermon, 85-86
Secession of South Carolina has been too hasty, 86
Hateful slaves, 86-87
Impudent slaves, 88-89
Prays for the country, 90-91
Trouble with slaves, providence, impudence, 92
Lincoln, inauguration, slavery, miscegenation, 95
Lincoln supporter want to "cut our throats," 97
John Brown, 97
Praying for country, fanatics, 104
Meanness of slaves, 105
North united, we are not stronger, only six states seceded, 108
Second thoughts about secession and lack southern unity, 112
Fort Sumter, 114-15