

Crawford, Samuel Wylie. Genesis of the Civil War: The Story of Sumter, 1860-61. New York: Charles L. Webster, 1887.

CHAPTER I.

United States Property in the Harbor of Charleston — Description of the Forts and their Armament — Their Defenseless Condition — Social Relations between the Officers and the People of Charleston

CHAPTER II.

Extra session of Legislature to appoint Presidential electors — Governor Gist's message urging action, in prospect of political change — Action of Legislature — Caucus — Feeling in the State — Action of United States Judge Magrath — Resignation of District- Attorney and Collector — Provides a bill for calling a Convention and to arm the State — Regular session of Legislature — Governor's messages and recommendations — Feeling in the State — Washington Light Infantry offer their services 9-20

CHAPTER III.

Political situation at Washington— The Cabinet — Their individual political views — The Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Cobb, determines to withdraw from public life in case of Mr. Lincoln's election — -Views of General Cass, the Secretary of State — Judge Black — Mr. Holt, the Secretary of War— Mr Floyd— The President determines to reinforce the Forts in Charleston Harbor — Action of Assistant Secretary of State Trescot — Southern Members of Cabinet consult — Assistant Secretary of State writes, asking Governor Gist to write to the President — Reply of the Governor — President sends a copy of his Message by the Assistant Secretary to Governor Gist, who is uninfluenced by it — South Carolina delegation arrive in Washington -The arrival of the Assistant Secretary with the President's Message, anticipated by telegram from Washington 21 ~35

CHAPTER IV.

President recognizes condition of things - His message of 3d December 1860— Its reception by his Cabinet —Resignation of Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Cobb, who is succeeded by Mr. Thomas, of Maryland — Effort to preserve the military status in Charleston Harbor — South Carolina delegation wait upon the President — Their interview — Written statement left with the President — Understanding of the delegation, of what was accomplished — Their impression — Explanation of Messrs. Miles and Keitt to the South Carolina Convention, of the understanding after Anderson's movement to Fort Sumter — Governor of South Carolina claims that the Government at Washington was pledged — Major Anderson not informed of it — Return of Assistant Secretary of State from Charleston — His interview with the President — General Cass, Secretary of State, urges reinforcement of the forts — President declines — Resignation of the Secretary, who seeks to withdraw it — Declined by the President, who tenders to Judge Black, the Attorney-General, the position of Secretary of State 36-44

CHAPTER V.

South Carolina Convention meets at Columbia — Organizes — Speech of President Jamison — Character of the Convention — Its composition — Relations to previous conventions — Committee to draft an ordinance of Secession appointed — Adjournment to Charleston —

Impatience of the people — Assembles at Institute Hall — Enthusiasm — Session of the Convention — Its proceedings bearing upon the public property in the harbor — Various resolutions adopted with reference to the Government at Washington — Committees appointed to report ordinance for Convention to form a Southern Confederacy— Chancellor Inglis, of Chesterfield, reports Ordinance of Secession— Passed unanimously — Governor and Legislature invited to be present at Institute Hall to witness the signing of ordinance — Great enthusiasm as procession passed — Hall crowded — Ordinance signed by every member — President announces the State of South Carolina an independent commonwealth — Quiet adjournment — Excitement of the people 45 _ 55

CHAPTER VI.

Colonel Gardiner at Moultrie — Makes requisition for Ordnance Stores — Issue made— Excitement in consequence —Telegrams to Washington— Relieved by Major Anderson— Sketch of a letter of Anderson to War Department, 24th of November— Importance of this letter— Force under Anderson— Work going on— Attempt to enroll workmen— Correspondence with War Department on the subject 56-67

CHAPTER VII.

Letter of War Department declining to reinforce — Feeling in Charleston that forts would be taken — Anderson's views — Letter to R. N. Gourdinand to his rector at Trenton, N. J. — Sandhills around the Fort — Refusal of the Government to allow him to reduce them — Importance of Sumter — Instructions of War Department to Anderson by Major Buell — Substance of his interview with Anderson — Buell's" order given to Anderson - Criticism on it from Buell himself — Further instructions from President not to make a desperate defense— Force of engineer workmen sent to Pinckney — Muskets sent to Pinckney and Sumter on Foster's requisition — Excitement in consequence — Action in Charleston and Washington — Muskets returned 68-78

CHAPTER VIII.

F. W. Pickens elected Governor of South Carolina — His character and history — Sends Major D. H. Hamilton, confidential messenger, to the President — His letter demanding Fort Sumter — Interview with President — Assistant Secretary of State interferes — Consults Senators Davis and Slidell — Letter withdrawn— President sends General Cushing to Governor Pickens — Failure of his mission - Governor establishes the guard-boat between Moultrie and Sumter — His orders — Press of the State urge the seizure of the forts 79~91

CHAPTER IX.

Work pushed on at Moultrie — Anderson dissatisfied with flanking defenses —Reports to Washington — Urges importance of Sumter — Requests permission to occupy it — Armament of Moultrie — Its defenses — Aggressive feeling of the people— Armament of Castle Pinckney — Work upon Fort Sumter— Ready for its guns — Guard-boat appears, and report made to Washington — Anderson's orders — His understanding of them — Not informed of any understanding — His private letters — Change in Anderson's manner — Determines to move his command to Fort Sumter 92-101

CHAPTER X.

Major Anderson moves his command from Moultrie to Sumter on December 26, 1860 — Excitement produced — Crowds come to the Island — Threats in consequence of movement— Governor sends Commissioners to Major Anderson — Orders Major Anderson to return — His refusal — Details of the interview — Commissioners return to Charleston — Raising the flag on Fort Sumter — The ceremonies, 102-112

CHAPTER XI

Seizure and occupancy of the forts in the harbor by the State— Lieutenant Meade at Castle Pinckney— United States Custom House occupied by the State — Lieutenant Snyder sent on a special mission to the Governor — Interview— Memorandum of the Governor — Colonel Huger — State guard over the arsenal — Seizure and occupancy of the arsenal — Seizure of Fort Johnson — Location of sites for batteries to control the entrance to the harbor — Star of the West battery located — The Governor reports his action to the Convention 113-125

CHAPTER XII.

Restricted means of the garrison— Anderson assumes definite position — His opinions — Does not now ask for reinforcement — His letter of January 6— Reasons for his movement to Sumter — Personal views in his private letters to a friend in Charleston, and to his former rector at Trenton, N.J. — Action of the engineer laborers — Increased activity in the harbor — Lights put out— Accidental notice of sailing of the Star of the West — Large force of workmen landed— Arming of fort pushed rapidly on — Short rations— Officers go to Fort Moultrie for their private effects — Threatened with arrest— Return to Sumter — West Point graduates sent to assist the men — Forts permanently occupied — Action of Board of Pilots- Governor issues proclamation forbidding entrance of any vessel bearing aid or supplies to the garrison — His instructions to his officers at Moultrie and the arsenal 126-139

CHAPTER XIII.

Washington — Effect of Anderson's movement — False report of reinforcement — Telegram of Governor — Reply of Secretary of War — Commissioners appointed by Convention — Arrive in Washington — President appoints day to receive them — Arrangement made by agent of South Carolina — News of Anderson's movement changes the relations — Statement in detail of agent of the State — President urged to restore the status — He declines — Anderson's movement without his orders— Secretary of War telegraphs to Anderson — Anderson's reply confirming report— President's action— Cabinet convened — Discussion — Copy of order by Major Buell sent for — South Carolina Commissioners — Interview with the President — They transmit their letter of authority from the Convention — Demand explanation of Anderson's movement — President receives Commissioners— Promises reply — President submits draft of letter to his Cabinet, who are divided in opinion — Northern members threaten resignation — No conclusion reached — Secretary of War Floyd tenders his resignation— Correspondence with the President— Secretary of State, Judge Black, determines to resign if letter is sent — President informed — Interview with Judge Black — Question of personal honor urged by the President — Commits draft of letter to Judge Black, who comments upon it — President's letter to Commissioners— Their action — Mr. Trescot, the agent of the State, interviews the President— Subsequently sees Mr. Hunter, of Virginia — Offers through him that the State would withdraw from the forts if the President would withdraw Anderson from Sumter

— President declines — Attorney-General Stanton's opinion — President yields, and sides with the Union sentiment. . . 140-161

CHAPTER XIV.

Lieutenant-General Scott— His character and relations to the administration—Confidence of the people in him — His " Views " volunteered to the Secretary of War — Their peculiar character — Published without consent or knowledge of the President — President's surprise — Regards the Views as likely to be used to excite the people in the cotton States — No practicable plan proposed — President believed it impossible to garrison all the forts — His duty, as he viewed it— General Scott comes to Washington — Secretary of War does not agree with him — President's policy in contradistinction to that of General Scott — Feeling in the country that Fort Sumter should be relieved — Propositions from private sources — General Scott persists in his design and recommendation to reinforce Fort Sumter — President agrees and General Scott objects to plan proposed — Later, again urges reinforcements to Sumter — Feeling of the people — Voluntary expeditions offered — President's determination to send reinforcements in a ship of war overruled — Finally determines to send an officer to Anderson with certain inquiries — General Scott recommends a mercantile steamer — Star of the West substituted for United States sloop of war Brooklyn — Preparation for her voyage — Meantime, Anderson reports himself safe — Sailing of the Star of the West — Details of the voyage and arrival 162-186

CHAPTER XV.

Council of the officers upon the firing upon the Star of the West — Their individual opinions — Major Anderson writes to the Governor — His threat to close the harbor to all vessels — Sends Lieutenant Hall, under a white flag, with letter to Governor — Scenes in Charleston — Reply of Governor, who avows the act — Council of officers reconvened — Anderson determines to send messenger to Washington — Lieutenant Talbot and the writer his messengers to Governor informing him of his change of purpose— Safeguard given to Talbot through the State — Governor sends messengers to Major Anderson, asking delivery of Fort Sumter to State — Interview — Governor's letter— Officers, reassembled in Council, reject the demand of Governor— Statement of messenger —Reply of Anderson to his letter— Upon Anderson's suggestion, matter referred to Washington —Lieutenant Hall selected as messenger by Anderson, Hon. J. W. Hayne by the Governor — His special instructions— Departs for Washington 187-197

CHAPTER XVI.

Preparations for defense actively pushed on— Guns mounted — Anderson reports fifty-one guns in position on 21st January — Heavy Columbiads mounted as mortars on the parade — Scarcity of material felt —Arrangements made to receive and transmit the mails — Four hulks of vessels sunk in the ship channel — Want of fresh provisions — State Secretary of War sends supply voluntarily — Provisions returned by Anderson — Erroneous statements made — Non-payment of contractor, cause of interruption of supply — Deficiency in small stores - Many workmen leave the fort — Efforts to dissatisfy those who remained — Return of Lieutenant Talbot from Washington — Approbation of the officials encourages the men— Anderson's forbearance to fire upon the Star of the West battery fully approved by the President — Letter of Secretary of War Holt — Not the purpose of the Government to reinforce him at present — If necessary, they would be sent upon his application —Presence of the women and children embarrass the garrison

— Anderson applies for permission from the Governor to send them to the North — Permission granted — Women and children depart — Relations between the Government and the State more clearly denned — Governor assembles an Ordnance Board — Objections made -- Recommendations; lines for defense — Sites for batteries suggested — Great activity displayed — Lighthouse at Morris Island removed — Anderson's caution against attempt of friends to throw in supplies — Progress of enemy's work reported by Captain Foster — Anderson reports his diminished supplies — The envoy of the Governor opens negotiations with the Government 198-212

CHAPTER XVII.

Secretary of War J. B. Floyd — His relations to the President — His early position — Sympathy with the South — The De Groot claim — Action of the Secretary — Claim refused — Abstraction of the Indian Trust bonds— Substitution for them of bills drawn on Secretary of War— Violation of the law — House of Representatives appoints a committee to investigate and report, at instance of Secretary of Interior — Exonerates that officer— Secretary of War implicated— President requests his resignation — Resigns on 29th December — Previous order of Secretary to transfer heavy ordnance to Southern forts yet unfinished — Excitement in Pittsburg, Pa. - President notified— Countermands the order — Transfer of small-arms to the South in 1859 — Investigation by House of Representatives— Committee on Military Affairs relieve him from any criminal intent — Secretary of War, upon return to Richmond, claims credit for the act — Subsequent appointment in the Confederate army 213-217

CHAPTER XVIII.

Envoy of Governor of South Carolina arrives in Washington — Informal and unofficial interview with the President — Informs the President of his mission verbally — Action of Southern Senators — Their communication — Envoy complies with their request, and withholds his communication temporarily — Proposes arrangement with the President, to whom this correspondence is sent — President's reply through his Secretary of War — Able letters of Secretary, who makes known the purpose of the President — President declines to make any arrangement — Will reinforce Major Anderson, should he require it — Senators again address the envoy, and oppose any collision upon the part of the State until their States were ready — Fort Sumter as 'property "—Correspondence with President sent to Governor Pickens— Reply of his Secretary of State, Judge Magrath — Reviews and criticizes it — Insists upon knowing the position of the Government — Demands surrender of Fort Sumter — President's reply to be at once communicated, when Governor would decide upon his course — Envoy to return 218 -225

CHAPTER XIX.

Envoy Hayne presents his letter to the President — Subsequently addresses President directly — Comments upon the letter of Secretary of War - Receives further instructions, and communicates as special envoy — Offers to make compensation for Fort Sumter — Comments upon the President's letter to the Southern Senators — Justifies the firing upon the. Star of the West — Able response of Secretary of War for the President — Fort Sumter as "property " — Answers propositions of envoy — Right of "eminent domain " cannot be asserted — No constitutional right in President to " cede or surrender " Fort Sumter — Right to send reinforcements "unquestionable " — President will send them, if necessary — Fort held as property and for no unfriendly purpose — Envoy replies directly to the President, and leaves Washington — His letter — The President declines to receive it — Letter returned to Colonel Hayne by mail . 226-234

CHAPTER XX.

President embarrassed by Major Anderson's "truce" — Determines to respect it — Considers that his instructions should have guided Major Anderson— Upon departure of the envoy, new expedition resolved upon — Members of the Cabinet interested in relief to Sumter — Letter of Judge Black, Secretary of State, to Lieutenant-General Scott— General Scott does not respond — Later, Judge Black addresses the President; reviews the situation -Urges decision of some policy in regard to Sumter — Ex-President John Tyler, a Commissioner from the Peace convention of Virginia, arrives in Washington — President sends his Secretary of State, in anticipation of his visit, to call upon him — The interview — President declines to become a party to proposed agreement— Transmits message to Congress on January 28, with the resolutions of the Virginia Convention — Congress ignores his recommendations — Subject dropped— Commissioner to South Carolina presents Virginia resolutions to the Legislature — Coldly received — Governor Pickens opposed — General Assembly declines to enter into negotiations -Commissioners continue their efforts — Ex-President Tyler telegraphs to Governor Pickens — Explains position of the President — Reply of Governor — Reports of interviews to relieve Sumter — Reports also of its immediate seizure by the State— Governor ' telegraphs to Montgomery, asking that a commander-in-chief be appointed — Meeting of Cabinet in Washington to determine upon plan of relief to Sumter— Details of plan — Additional proposition of Captain G. V. Fox — Its detail — General Scott approves preparations made — President changes his mind— He determines to respect the appeal made by Virginia — Will not precipitate a crisis — Astonishment and disappointment of General Scott — His subsequent letter to the incoming President — President Buchanan's statement — Captain Fox again urges his plan 235-251

CHAPTER XXI.

President Buchanan's views as to the coercive powers of the Government — Congress meets— President's message of December 2 — Review of the political situation — Recommendations — Denies any danger to Southern rights — No right as President to decide relations between Government and State — Secession not the right of a State— Congress no constitutional right to coerce State attempting secession — Recommends "explanatory amendment," recognizing property in slaves and their protection in the Territories — Message disappoints Southern leaders — Congress neglects to act — President sends special message on January 8 — Reiterates his position and views — Reasons for not reinforcing Major Anderson — Jefferson Davis's opinion of the message — Senate refuse to confirm Collector for Charleston, S. C. — Crittenden amendment — Endorsed by the President — Amended by wholly different resolution — Original proposition defeated — Peace Convention of Virginia — Efforts to effect a settlement — Series of amendments offered — Propositions made — Mr. Crittenden adopts a proposition in preference to his own — Senate rejects it — Cotton States pass ordinances of Secession — Seize the public property — Congress relies upon time and the incoming administration 252-258

CHAPTER XXII.

Delegates from cotton States meet at Montgomery, Ala. — Form a provisional Congress — Executive, legislative and judicial departments formed — The United States of America "a foreign country" — The establishment and organization of the " Government " — Acts passed — Assumes control of the "questions and difficulties" existing with the General Government — Nature of the Government — General Convention not competent to exigency — Declares itself a provisional Government at first — Exercises all power — Governor Pickens seeks counsel of Jefferson Davis — His reply — Writes again on the 20th of January — His letter — Governor Pickens consults the Governor of Georgia— His reply — Threatened attack upon Sumter — Mr. Robert Toombs urges against the attack, except with sanction of "our joint Government" — Reply of Governor Pickens — Recommends the appointment of a commander-in-chief— Counsels that the "Congress" should indicate jurisdiction — His views and arguments — Thinks on 12th of February that he is prepared to take Fort Sumter— Ask: if he shall await orders, or act himself— Jefferson Davis - Provisional President of new Government -Appoints a general officer for Charleston—Governor applies for a "skilled engineer " — Captain Whiting sent — His adverse report— Work at Cummings Point pushed steadily on 250-272

CHAPTER XXIII.

Salutes upon Washington's birthday in Charleston Harbor — Scenes in. Washington— President countermands order for parade of troops — Representative Sickles protests — Interview with the President at the War Department —President yields — Parade takes place — Makes explanation to Ex-President Tyler — His letter— Major G. T. Beauregard selected as Brigadier-General of the new Confederacy—His character and history —Proceeds to Charleston — Makes thorough inspection — Unfavorable result— Absence of systematic organization and control - Operations around Sumter changed - Detached batteries located on shores of harbor - Fort Sumter to be enveloped by a circle of fire —Defenses of Fort Moultrie rebuilt— Chief Engineer's accurate observations and reports -His letter to his chief— Major Anderson clearly reports his condition, and the work going on around him., 273-281

CHAPTER XXIV.

Close of President Buchanan's administration — Condition of the country —Anderson's letter of February 28 — Its character— Estimate of himself and officers — Relieving force necessary— Letter delivered to President on 4th of March — Transmitted to incoming President by Secretary of War Holt on 5th of March — Resume of President Buchanan's course in dealing with the seceded States — His failure to recognize the real condition of affairs — His policy and action — Secretary Holt's letter accompanying Anderson's communication — Misled by Anderson's statements — Believed Anderson safe — Line of policy not to reinforce, unless called upon by Anderson, adhered to — Anderson's previous report— Main statements of his condition — Impossible to relieve him without large force — Anderson's views in private correspondence — Important letter to a Rhode Island correspondent— Good condition of the garrison — annoyances from without — Irritation of the people — Floating battery — Anderson asks for instructions in regard to it — Reply of Secretary of War —Destruction of the temporary wooden buildings on the parade — Ammunition furnished to the batteries— Rearrangement of the guns — Gorge protected and strengthened — Anderson mines the wharf 282-298

CHAPTER XXV.

Work at Sumter — Reports of Anderson and Captain Foster— Work at Cummings Point — Firing for range from channel batteries — Foster reports batteries around — Inaugural of President Lincoln — War-like construction placed upon it — General Beauregard assumes command — Urged by Montgomery Government to push the work — Reports of evacuation of Fort Sumter— Confederate Secretary of War informs Beauregard — Apprehension as to mines — Correspondence of Beauregard and Anderson — Terms required — Anderson "deeply hurt" at the conditions imposed— Wigfall establishes recruiting station in Baltimore for the Confederacy — Adjutant-General Samuel Cooper, U. S. A., resigns his commission — Takes similar position in the Confederacy — Peace Convention in session in Virginia — Defeats resolution of secession — President Lincoln determines to confer with some prominent Union member — J. B. Baldwin selected — Propositions said to have been made — Denials— Controversy in consequence— Baldwin returns — Convention passes the Ordinance of Secession — President's proclamation — Both sides prepare for the inevitable struggle 299-313

CHAPTER XXVI.

Confederate Congress authorizes appointment of three Commissioners to Washington— Messrs. Crawford, Roman and Forsyth selected — Their instructions -Commissioner Crawford arrives in Washington — " Fully satisfied " that to approach Mr. Buchanan would be disadvantageous — Commissioner reports to the Confederate Secretary of State — Senator W. H. Seward to be the new Secretary of State— His peaceful policy— Inauguration of Mr. Lincoln — Commissioner reports to his Government— Commissioner Forsyth arrives — Report of the two Commissioners — Senator R. M. T. Hunter — Propositions for delay made to Commissioner — Authorities at Montgomery consider a delay a doubtful policy — Evacuation of Sumter to be insisted upon — Secretary of State declines to receive the Commissioners — Associate Justice Campbell offers to mediate — Associate Justice Nelson also interests himself- Question of the evacuation of Sumter — Associate Justice Campbell's memoranda—Further instructions from Montgomery — Warlike armaments—Volunteers called out at Charleston — Memorandum of Secretary of State — Its effect — The Commissioners leave Washington— Judge Campbell to Secretary of State— Writes to the President — Sumter fired upon 314-345

CHAPTER XXVII.

Anderson's estimate of force necessary to relieve him — Referred to General Scott — His opinion — Plan of relief of Captain Fox. — President calls for written opinions of his Cabinet in regard to Sumter— Views of the Secretary of State— Opinions of the Secretary of War, Postmaster-General, Secretary of the Treasury — Opinion of Brigadier-General Totten, Chief Engineer— General Scott changes his views — Abandonment of Fort Sumter a "sure necessity" — His Memorandum for the Secretary of War— Francis P. Blair— His interview with the President — Letter of the Postmaster-General — Speculations upon the opinions of the Cabinet — Secretary Chase corrects statement of his position — His letters — Final position of the Secretary of War 346-368

CHAPTER XXVIII.

President desires further information from Major Anderson— Captain Fox sent as messenger — Arrives at Sumter — His interview with Anderson— Statement of provisions given to him — Visit of Ward H. Lamon— Professed object, removal of command— Provisions being rapidly exhausted—Anderson asks instructions— Firing of batteries upon ice schooner attempting to enter harbor — Anderson sends an officer to Governor— Result -Important despatch of Commissioner Crawford — Anderson writes to Washington Despondent feeling— Important communication of Secretary of War— Powerful battery suddenly unmasked on Sullivan's Island- Effect upon Anderson —Captain Fox accused of breach of faith--Charleston authorities seize the mails— Important despatch of Anderson taken —His letter 369-387

CHAPTER XXIX.

South Carolina Convention still in session — All resolutions referring to Sumter laid on the table — Governor requested to call for volunteers—Military interests transferred to Confederate Government-Convention adjourns April 10 -Important telegram from Commissioner Crawford— Anderson alarmed and impressed by it — His earnest letter to his Government — Asks for instructions— Confederate Secretary of War to Beauregard — Conflicting telegrams from Washington to Charleston —Lieutenant Talbot arrives in "Washington—President gives notice to Governor Pickens of his intention to provision Fort Sumter, and to reinforce if resisted — Talbot, with Mr, Chew, of State Department, goes to Charleston — The notice — Read to Governor in presence of Beauregard — Messengers' abrupt return — Their journey impeded — Volunteers called for — Anderson reports — Feeling in Fort Sumter — Floating battery in position — Provisions exhausted — Boat with white flag approaches the work 388-400

CHAPTER XXX.

Affairs at Fort Pickens — Quasi truce established — Chief Engineer Totten — Communication to the War Department in regard to Sumter and Pickens — The President not yet determined upon his course — Pressure upon him — Finally determines — Orders troops on Brooklyn to be landed at Pickens — Commanding officer--refuses, on account of "truce" — "Provisional expedition " prepared— Its detail — United States steamship Powhatan— Her arrival — Her preparation to refit for sea — Determination to send provisional expedition — Other expeditions under authority of the President — Its detail — Action of Secretary of State — His interview with General Scott — Result— Lieutenant D. D. Porter selected to command Powhatan— 'Secret orders — Interview with the President — Orders to Porter — Difficulties in procuring funds — Attempt to detain the Powhatan— Finally sails— Arrives at Pensacola— Result of the Expedition— Fort Pickens supplied and reinforced — Provisional expedition sails for Charleston Harbor — Its late arrival — Fort Sumter bombardment — Absence of the tugs— Expedition unsuccessful— President's letter to Captain Fox 401-420

CHAPTER XXXI.

Effect of notice of President upon authorities in Charleston — Their action— Reply of Montgomery Government— Demand for the immediate surrender of the fort — Anderson's reply — Verbal statement to the messenger — Reported to Montgomery — Reply of Confederate Secretary of War — Anderson declines its terms — Bombardment opened on morning of the 12th of April — Description of the fire of the batteries— Maintained all day — Mortar fire all night — Sumter opens fire at 7 o'clock — Service of its batteries — Effect of the enemy's fire upon the fort— Fleet arrives — Men withdrawn from the batteries at night 421-433

CHAPTER XXXII.

Mortar firing through the night — Anticipating the fleet — Heavy firing opened in the morning — Fort Sumter replies "early and spitefully " — Scarcity of Cartridges — Fire restricted in consequence — Quarters set on fire by shells and hot shot — Increased fire of the batteries — Fort threatened with explosion — Magazines closed — Flames spread— Woodwork consumed — Flag-staff shot away — Flag restored at once— Colonel Wigfall crosses in small boat from Cummings Point — His visit unauthorized — Enters the fort — Interview with Major Anderson — Terms of evacuation proposed — Major Anderson consents — Wigfall departs — White flag raised — Three aides of Confederate general come to fort under white flag — Interview with Anderson - Aides return to Charleston — Wigfall' s visit without knowledge of Confederate general — "Formal and final terms" presented — Anderson accepts — Condition of the fort — Effect of the fire upon it— Casualties slight — Four men wounded— Salute to the flag permitted — Serious explosion, and result — State troops take possession — Captain Ferguson, aide-de camp to commanding general, raises Confederate flag over the work— Garrison transferred to the steamer Baltic which leaves for the North 434-448

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Return of the garrison of Fort Sumter to New York — Their separation for service — Their individual careers in the war — Present condition of the fort — Wholly changed in appearance and in its armament — Main defense of the harbor 449-458

APPENDIX I.

Sources of information 459

APPENDIX II.

General Beauregard's Order No. 9 464

APPENDIX III.

Extract from President Lincoln's Message, 1861 466

APPENDIX IV.

Official Report of killed and wounded 470

APPENDIX V.

General Anderson's letter to Hon. E. M, Stanton 471

Index 473