

Edge, Frederick Milnes. Slavery Doomed: Or, the Contest Between Free and Slave Labour in the United States. London: Smith, Elder and Co., 1860.

Introduction.

England interested in the present crisis in the United States, not merely on humanitarian grounds, but because her supply of Cotton from America may be imperilled during the next four years

ix

Establishment of the Union 1

The Northern States not Abolitionist 3

Reasons why Slavery has been abolished in some States and retained in others 9

Comparison of the Free and Slave States 15

New York and Virginia 17

Population of the United States in 1840, 1850, and 1860 . 20

Acres under Cultivation in 1850 and 1860 31

Produce of the Two Sections, 1850 33

Value of Land, North and South 35

Railroads 37

Banks 40

Imports and Customs 44

United States Revenue 45

Postal Revenue 46

Principal Employments of Free Male Population over Fifteen Years of Age, 1850 47

Education and Intelligence 49

Scholastic Institutions in the United States, 1850 . . 52

Public Libraries, &c, in do. do. ... 54

Periodicals in do. do. ... 56

Reasons why the South has hitherto dominated the Union . 59

The Missouri Compromise 67

The Fugitive Slave Act 73

The Foreign Policy of the Pro-Slavery Party. — Annexation and Filibusterism 75

The Act forcing Slavery upon Kansas 89

The Struggle for Freedom in Kansas 94

Proceedings in Congress upon the Kansas Troubles . . 137

The Dred Scott Decision 151

Scenes in Congress 159

Slavery and the Church 166

The last Presidential Election 174

The Electoral College : Mode of electing Presidents . . 176

Causes of Mr. Buchanan's Success in 1856 179

The Democratic Platform of 1856 181

The American do. do 182

The Republican do. do 185

Mr. Buchanan's Administration 191

Mr. Forney and the Democracy 192

John Brown 198

Governor Wise, of Virginia 200

Governor Letcher 204
The " New York Quarterly Review " upon Mr. Buchanan's Policy 206
The Nominations for the Presidency 211
The Result of the forthcoming Presidential Election . .219
How the Result will affect England 222
The Slave-trade 223
Conclusion 224